

Earth Education International
Costa Rica

Condensed Spring Semester in Sustainable Global Stewardship

Mid-February through Mid-April Annually

* Open to Students from ANY Campus ****

Academics & Coursework

- Interdisciplinary coursework applicable to all majors
- Undergraduate or graduate credit available
- English instruction, no Spanish required
- 12-15 units of transfer credit from Humboldt State University:
 - Society & Sustainability (3 cr.)
 - Environmental Sustainability & Field Planning (3 cr.)
 - Costa Rican Culture Immersion (3 cr.)
 - Elementary or Intermediate Spanish (3 cr.)
 - Directed Study (3 cr., optional by special arrangement)

A few past volunteer work sites: Organic farming, construction, and composting.

Field Study & Volunteer Work

- Day-long and multiple-day field trips to appropriate sites in Costa Rica (e.g., sustainable businesses, community conservation sites, renewable energy projects, private reserves, national parks, volcanoes, community eco-tourism projects).
- An extended field excursion in Southwestern Nicaragua including extensive field study, cultural events, and volunteer work.
- Volunteer service-learning work at selected field study sites. Possible sites include: Organic agriculture, sustainable businesses, environmental education, social work, environmental conservation, ecotourism, and housing construction for low-income families.

Some sites & activities visited during past field excursions to Nicaragua

Comprehensive Program Fee Includes

- Twelve (12) units of academic credit from Humboldt State University
- Homestay costs while in San Ramón (lodging & three meals per day)
- Minimum required travel health insurance (with deductible)
- Use of the facilities at the host university in San Ramón
 - Field site entrance fees & associated costs
 - In-country program travel & lodging
 - Various other program activities

For More Information

For current cost & other details: www.EarthEdIntl.org/Spring.htm

To contact us: info@EarthEdIntl.org

Application deadline: November 1st annually

